John Resnik

Nevada City, California 95959

Dear Mr. Resnik:

I received your phone call on April 11, 1989. I apologize for the length of time it has taken me to get the answer to your question. I hope the following material will be of assistance to you.

I first ran across Utah liquor Co. by going through our old Polk Directories, known better to us as the Salt Lake City Directories, in the 1894-1895 directory at 167 So. Main. Utah Liquor Co. was at this address until 1903 when it moved to 223 So. Main.

My co-worker was working on another reference question when he ran across the enclosed ad about the Utah Liquor Co. moving, I thought this was a neat coincidence. The date of the paper is on the back of the ad.

I have copied most of the pages from the Salt Lake City Directories up until 1916 when the Utah Liquor Co. appeared for the last time. I have no access to Indexes to the Salt Lake Tribune before 1942, so finding any articles about their going out of business would be a by chance thing like the above ad. Prohibition started in Utah in either 1917 or 1918 depending on the state and I do not have an exact date on that.

I enclosed two other copies from the 1891-92 and 1893 Directory because at 223-225 S. Main was occupied by Henry Sadler a wholesale Wine dealer. I tried to back track to find if he sold out or what. I looked for obituaries which sometimes carries a lot of information. I found none for Mr. Sadler for Mr. Bergerman. I found Mrs. Bergermans Obituary but it didn't say anything about when her husband had died or the business.

There is a very minimal cost for this material. One dollar plus postage so I will not charge you.

Thank you for calling us at the Salt Lake City Library and We hope that we can be of assistance to you again in the future.

Sincerely,

Lois Archuleta

Reference Librarian
